Justice Samuel Webb of Hoboken gave a scision yesterday in the case of Logan against Ralph, which was tried on Saturday. The amount involved was not great, but there were objections, arguments, points of law, and keen practice sufficient for an elevated railway case. Miss Matilda Logan sued Mr. Robert Raiph, a wellto-do householder of 293 Garden street, Ho-boken, to recover $10.75, balance due for her wages as a domestic. She employed Lawyer Leonard to represent her. Mr. Raiph was defended by Mr. White. Miss Logan's case was ppened with the statement by her counsel that she had been duly employed, that she had reseived $1.25 on account, and that $10.75 was yet due. Then Miss Logan took the stand in her own behalf. She were a silk dress, a cloth cloak, and a hat with a black feather. Miss Logan spoke clearly and promptly.

Q.—Who employed you? A.—Mrs. Ralph.

Q.—What occurred when you entered into this conversation with Mrs. Ralph? "Stop there!" shouted Mr. White. "I object. It is not Mrs. Ralph who is sued here, but Mr.

Raiph. You can't sue one party and bring in evidence against another." Can't we?" retorted Mr. Leonard. "I guess you don't know what you are talking about. You ought to understand that the head of the Fou ought to understand that the head of the house is responsible for what the wife does in procuring necessaries for the family."

"You can't come that over me," ejaculated Mr. White. These servant girls cases are never contested as they ought to be. I don't care if fifty men said differently, Mrs. Ralph is not sued here, and it makes no difference what agreement this girl made with her."

"Why," replied Mr. Leonard, "ever since the relation of husband and wife was known it has been acknowledged in every civilized country that the husband and wife are one in such cases. It is established by the laws of New Jersey. This poor girl could not have sued anybody else than Mr. Ralph."

"Why, your Honor, their complaint says the Egreement was made with Mrs. Ralph," said Mr. White.

"Well suppose it does; do you want me to "Well suppose it does; do you want me to

"Well, suppose it does; do you want meto prove that they were legally married?" inquired Mr. White.

"Well, suppose it does; do you want meto prove that they were legally married?" inquired Mr. Leonard.

"The Court rules in this case that man and wife are one," interposed Justice Webb.

"That may be your law, but we don't approve of it, and will test it in some other place," said Mr. White. Then the testimony was continued.

Q.—What agreement did you make? A.—To do general housework. I went there on Sept. 2 and remained until Sept. 26. I did all that was required. I recognized Mr. Ralph as the head of the house, Mrs. Ralph told me that she wanted me to understand that Mr. Ralph was the head of the house.

Q.—How came she to say that? A.—That was on my saying he was no gentleman to go looking at my clothes I had put to soak.

"Hold on," shouted Mr. White, "Do I understand this Court to rule that a wife can make a contract for her husband?"

"I rule that man and wife are one," said Justice Webb.

"In what way? In law, or justice, or equity?"

e Webb.
In what way? In law, or justice, or equity?"
manded Mr. White, with some asperity.
In both," said Justice Webb, with dignity.
I never heard of it in my life before," said.
Whita.

"In both," said Justice Webb, with dignity.

"I never heard of it in my life before," said Ir. White.

"Here is the statute. Show the contrary if rou can," replied Justice Webb, holding the levised Statutes of the State of New Jersey out or Mr. White's inspection. Mr. White declined he book, and the case went on.

Q. When were you discharged? A. Mrs. Saiph told me the clothes were soaked in pearline, and that Mr. Raiph had found it out and sold her. I told her that Mr. Raiph was not much of a gentleman to go poking into the blothes that I had put to soak before washing. She told me that he was the boss of the house. Mr. Raiph came running into the kitchen. Mrs. Balph said I must work up to the 3d of October before my month was up. I said I would only work to the 2d because I went there on the 2d. Mr. Raiph said "You will work to the 3d." I said "You will work to the 3d." I said "I will, it you pay me a dollar." He said he would spend $100 before he would pay me. He said how ould spend $100 before he would pay me. He said I would not be murdered in the house, and I opened the kitchen door and ran out on the sidewalk. Mrs. Raiph called me in, and said that if I came to court I would be arrested. She said that I would not get a cent of my money if I came to court. I said "I will try." I worked there from Sept. 2 to Sept. 26, and received only $1.25. I was to have $12 per month. Then Mr. White cross-examined the witness. Q.—What did Mr. Raiph tell you? A.—He told me to get out of his place; to get out of his house. I said. "All right, I will, Mr. Raiph." Q.—You had time to put on your things? A.—Yee, sir.

Q.—You were not killed then? A.—No, sir. I —Yee, sir. Q.—You were not killed then? A.—No, sir. I pposed I would be. Q.—Have you haid any costs into court here? Your counsel took this as a surprise case, didn't he?

"That's pettifogging, and I object," shouted Lawyer Leonard. "If this is a poor woman and I choose to give her my valuable services and $1,000 besides, it's none of your business."

This closed the plaintiff's case, and Mr. White, before calling witnesses for the defence, moved a nonsuit on the ground that the piaintiff had refused to work when called back, and herefore left voluntarily. This Justice webb overruled on the ground that the girl had been ordered away by Mr. Raiph. Then the de-fence called Mr. Raiph, a stout gentleman, with a quick, nervous manner, and a face not unlike President Arthur's. Mr. Raiph did not need fence called Mr. Ralph, a stout gentleman, with a quick, nervous manner, and a face not unlike President Arthur's. Mr. Ralph did not need much prompting.

Q.—What do you know about this case? A.—I don't know much about it. I was satting in the basement, talking with Mr. Dornheim, when I heard this noise in the kitchen. I listened some time, and then I thought it was sime for me to see what it was about. When I came into the kitchen this girl was flability with my wife. I said to this girl: "Mallida, you must not be so savey," She was talking away like a locometive. Finally I got a chance to say; "If you don't shat up I will put you out of the house." Then my wife said I was getting excited, and said, "I will settle this," and put her hand on my shoulder for me to go back. I had been sick, and she did not want me to get excited. Then the girl ran up stairs. She threw down her apron, containing about a pound of soda, which she intended to ruin the washing with. Then she ran out, and my wife called her back to work, but she would not came. I went back to my paper, and on looking out of the window saw her going, and said to my wife: "Ellen, that girl is running away." I heard my wife tell her to go to work.

On cross-examination, Mr. Ralph said he had kept house sixteen years; that he had kept girls three, five and soven years; and was not in the moise in the kitchen.

Q.—Did you know there was to be some trouble about the use of the pearline? A.—On the evening before I spoke about it to my wife when I discovered it. I knew my wife was going to reproach her the next morning.

Q.—You are the head of that house, are you not? A.—Yes, sir; I furnish the money, but my wife hires and pays the girls.

Mre. Ralph was the next witness. She corroborated her husband's account of the origin of the trouble, and of her calling the girl back and telling her to go to work. She said she had ordered Matlida to use only one teaspoonful of pearline to each boiler full of ciohes when boiling, but she did not want the clothes soked in i

FOXHALL'S UNKNOWN BACKER. Is He One of the Lucky Mr. Walton's Two

When Francis T. Walton of the S! James Hotel went to Europe he had two companions. One of them was a Mr. Root of the western part of this State, and the other was a Western man. of this State, and the other was a Western man. Some reports credit Mr. Walton with having won over $400,000 on Foxhall's recent victory. There is also said to be another heavy winner, whose name, however, has not been made known to the public. The question has been asked whether this mysterious person is not one of Mr. Walton's companions. Sporting men in New York argue that no one would be more likely to risk money on Foxhall than a man who travelied with Mr. Walton. Some say that the unknown winner is an agent of Mr. Keens himself, who, it is thus conjectured, has been backing his own horse. The winnings attributed to him amount to about $125,000. It is said, on the other hand, that sil of Mr. Keens's bets on Foxhall would probably have been made through Mr. Bathgate, his agent in stud matters in England.
